The PATRIOT Act's War on Charity

<http://www.truthout.org/article/the-patriot-acts-war-charity>

Maya Schenwar, Truthout: "Since the PATRIOT Act's passage almost seven years ago, many of its adverse effects on activist organizations and peace groups have become plain.... But according to a new report, the worst effects on nonprofit organizations have garnered little attention."

Battle Over Chemical-Exposure Legislation

WORLD ORGANIZATION OF NATURAL MEDICINE PRACTITIONERS
NEWSLETTER 2008

Susan Sward, The San Francisco Chronicle: "An Assembly leader is pledging a down-to-the-wire fight for legislation that would require the state to adopt worker exposure standards for all known cancer-causing chemicals."

Adopting America's Bad Habits

<http://www.truthout.org/article/adopting-americas-bad-habits>

Pamela Constable, The Washington Post: "Armed with an array of plastic eggs, grapes, broccoli and a nasty looking cross-section of an artery clogged with cholesterol, Carlos Garcia was demonstrating the hidden dangers of American cooking and eating for a group of young Hispanic mothers in Silver Spring."

California Bars Restaurant Use of Trans Fats

<http://www.truthout.org/article/california-bars-restaurant-use-trans-fats>

Jennifer Steinhauer, The New York Times: "California, a national trendsetter in all matters edible, became the first state to ban trans fats in restaurants when Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger signed a bill Friday to phase out their use."

Rights Group Wants US Officials Probed for Ordering Torture

<http://www.truthout.org/article/rights-group-wants-us-officials-probed-ordering-torture>

Agence France-Press: "A Nobel-prize-winning rights group said US officials committed war crimes by ordering what the group says was torture of detainees, and called for them to be probed and prosecuted."

EPA to White House: Greenhouse Gases Endanger Health

<http://www.truthout.org/article/epa-white-house-greenhouse-gases-endanger-health>

Juliet Eilperin, The Washington Post: "Under a subpoena threat from Senator Barbara Boxer (D-California), who chairs the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, the Environmental Protection Agency late Wednesday sent the panel a copy of its December 5 proposal to regulate greenhouse gases under the Clean Air Act as a brief loan."

Superbugs: not isolated only by hospitals and antibiotics!

<http://www.truthout.org/article/superbugs>

In 1968, Moellering travelled to Malaita, in the Solomon Islands. "I was really interested to see whether we could find an antibiotic-resistant population of bacteria in a place that had never seen antibiotics," Moellering said. The natives practiced head-hunting and cannibalism, and were isolated as much by conflict as by the island's dense jungle. Moellering identified microbes there that were resistant to the antibiotics streptomycin and tetracycline, which were then in use in the West but had never been introduced clinically on Malaita. Later studies found resistant bacteria in many other isolated indigenous human populations, as well as in natural reservoirs like aquifers.

The Food Crisis and Global Institutions

<http://www.truthout.org/article/the-food-crisis-and-global-institutions>

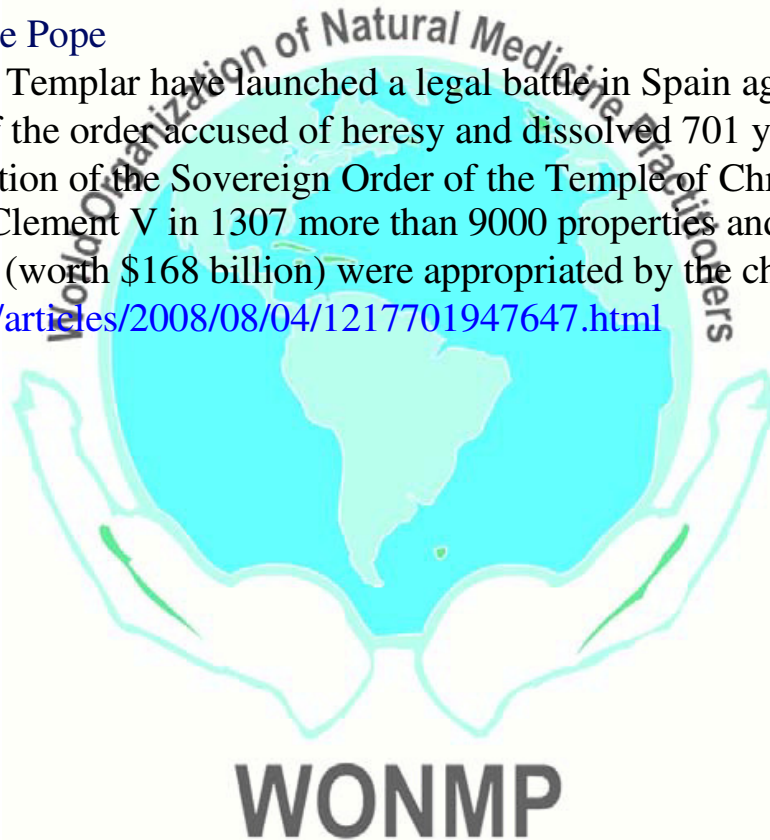

Alexandra Spieldoch, Foreign Policy In Focus: "In July, World Trade Organization Director-General Pascal Lamy organized a mini-Ministerial to complete the Doha Development Round, and couched it as a necessary means to address the food crisis. Not surprisingly, negotiations collapsed over ongoing disagreements about whether WTO members have the right to protect their food security and 'livelihoods' (jobs) from import surges. The failed talks signal a growing understanding that trade liberalization has destabilized local food systems and hurt farmers, contributing to both the long-term and short-causes of today's food crisis. This marks a shift from the earlier globalization debates and deserves our attention."

Knights Templars sue the Pope

The heirs of the Knights Templar have launched a legal battle in Spain against the Pope to salvage the reputation of the order accused of heresy and dissolved 701 years ago.

Members of the Association of the Sovereign Order of the Temple of Christ claim that when the order was dissolved by Clement V in 1307 more than 9000 properties and commercial ventures belonging to the knights (worth $168 billion) were appropriated by the church.

THE NEW HOMEOPATHY

Problem: For decades, homeopaths, applied kinesiologists, electrodermal screeners, and body workers have used homeopathic vials sealed in glass and plastic containers, and developed or exercised their intent to transfer the energy to the body or other vials of water. In electrodermal screening (electroacupuncture according to Voll) -it is called medication testing . A person's energy is tested for strength or weakness, then a vial is placed in the hand or on the body, or in-circuit using a medicine test plate, then it is retested.

The problem is, soft electrons (mitogenic radiations) are completely blocked by glass! And for all practical purposes, skewed or distorted by plastic (acrylic or polypropylene plastic made from petroleum). This was proven by the biological studies in mitogenic radiation of Gavrilovich Gurwitsch (see below, in the 1922, the Russian biophysicist demonstrated an interesting optical phenomenon associated with cells; a phenomenon he called 'mitogenetic radiation.' Gurwitsch showed that adjacent cells could be stimulated to divide optically by endogenous UV radiation generated by cells in optical contact with them. These emissions, now referred to as biophotons [soft electrons], have the property of stimulating growth and cellular activity, but are blocked by ordinary petri glass).

Reaction: So what have we been doing all these years, testing remedies through glass, making (simulating) remedies from sealed ampules? Sometimes it seems to work and other times, we know it doesn't!

Oriental philosophy speaks of two types of light - visible and invisible. Invisible light is made visible when it interacts with matter. Invisible lights are wave motions outside of the physical universe. Consider then the atoms inhaling and exhaling various forms of invisible light photons and when it resonates with these waveforms, color is made manifest. In this view, the atoms are constantly inhaling and exhaling aether (luminiferous aether, in early physics considered to be the medium through which light propagates and was of specific interest to Einstein and other physicists).

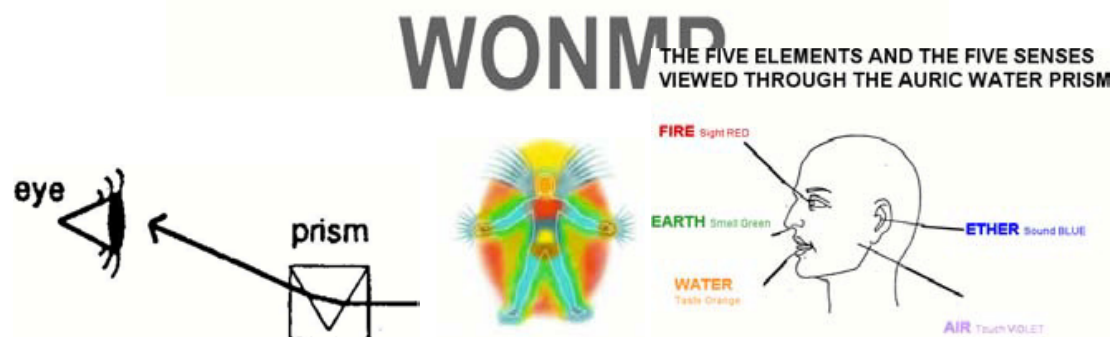

Soft electrons are formative photons that intermingle with matter, spin with the electron, and begin to take formative shape. These "etheric formative forces" can interact with the molecules of the phenomenal world, only until transformed by resonant or more powerful forces that transmute them, or sets them free back into the cosmic continuum. Some physicists have called them virtual particles. They are highly associated with aromas, odors, flavors, living beings, and homeopathic remedies, etc.

The Dirac sea is a theoretical model of the vacuum as an infinite sea of particles possessing negative energy. It was invented by the British physicist Paul Dirac in 1930 to explain the anomalous negative-energy quantum states predicted by the Dirac equation for relativistic electrons. The positron, the antimatter counterpart of the electron, was originally conceived of as a hole in the Dirac sea, well before its experimental discovery in 1932. Dirac, Einstein and others recognised that it is related to the 'metaphysical' aether.

Solution: The Auric Water Prism reveals the bouquet of hidden colors. The prism's power of spectral separation will help your diagnosis of harmonic remedies and energies to balance your patient's color hunger. The Prism is intended to make accessible a broad range of information in the elemental composition of the patient as well as applicable colors, gems, and homeopathic remedies... Soft electrons are concentrated in nervous tissues that are our contact points to the external world - the eyes, ears, nose, tongue, and skin. It is here the prism will reveal the condition of the soft electrons of the five elements. It is here we can witness the ancient knowledge of the adepts of earlier generations.
